GOVERNOR HEARS OF FORT SHAFTER ROAD

Senator-Elect writes, Advocating That Work Be Started Immediately.

The extension of streets from Nuanu to Fort Shafter as a matter of military necessity was advocated in The Advertiser last week, on the ground that more than one road leading from the center of the city of Honolulu to the military post was necessary not only for the armed forces, but for the residents of the great section lying between Nuanu avenue and the military reservation.

This view is backed up in a letter presented to Governor Frear yesterday by Senator-elect A. F. Judd, who advocates street extension to the military post, so as to open up the great undivided blocks for better residence purposes, to drain the lands off, believing that the building of roads is cheaper than to use extraordinary measures to get rid of mosquito-ridden lands. His letter follows:

The Letter.

"As a resident of the fifth representative district, I have been giving much thought to the many problems now existing in the town precincts of Honolulu west of Nuanu avenue, and I desire to outline to you certain ideas and to suggest if these ideas meet with your approval that you take the initiative in the program.

"The part of town I refer to consists almost entirely of large blocks of land with houses of various kinds along the street frontages, but with the interiors of the blocks devoted to agriculture. Into the interiors access can be had only by the use of narrow and crooked lanes. It is in this part of town where most of the tuberculosis is located and where most of the large tenement houses have been erected. The sewer system takes care of but a small proportion of the sewage. There is a great deal of running water in open ditches and drains.

"My suggestion is that through the superintendent of public works there be planned a comprehensive system of streets from Nuanu avenue to Moanalua, with sufficient data to enable the legislative arms of the government, both territorial and municipal, to decide upon some definite policy of street building.

"The social argument in favor of more streets is that with a greater opportunity for house lots near the center of town the patronage of the tenements will diminish.

"The military argument for this policy is obvious. There is only one road now to Fort Shafter and to Pearl Harbor.

Provides for Growth.

"Some such scheme as above outlined will have to be undertaken in order to provide for the expansion of Honolulu in the next ten years, and particularly for the growth incident to the opening of Pearl Harbor. I believe that the people living in town and working at Pearl Harbor, going back and forth from day to day, will prefer to live in the western part of town.

"The sanitary reason for this extension of roads is, to my mind, the most important one; for without streets the proper disposal of sewage from this part of town and an adequate handling of the mosquito problem will be impossible. The agricultural land to which I refer would automatically be drained and turned into house sites, with a probable benefit to the owners. The wholesale condemnation of agricultural land as such, in order to get rid of the mosquito, would entail an expense too great for this community to bear. It is cheaper to build streets.

Would Benefit All.

"I do not have to say that the part of town I refer to is where the common people of this city largely live. Most of them do not know how to make their civic wants known. For instance, the Makiki district in Honolulu has cement gutters along the roadsides. In the part of town I speak of there are no cement gutters except in one or two places. In the Makiki district cement gutters are necessary to preserve the roads. In the part of town I speak of cement gutters are necessary to preserve the health of the city.

"I do not at the present time desire to do more than make an earnest plea to you that the preliminary work of making surveys and estimates be inaugurated at once. If any person will walk through the district I refer to, I believe one trip of investigation will be sufficient to convince him that what I speak of is a matter which concerns not only the residents of the fifth district, but also just as much every citizen of Honolulu and of the Territory.

"With public sentiment awakened to the urgency of the situation, I believe the ways and means can be provided."

ORIGIN OF WELL-KNOWN POEM IS HONOLULU

Superintendent J. F. Eckardt, of the Queen's Hospital, in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Press, discusses the authorship of the poem "Over the Hills to the Poor House," which he believes may have originated in Honolulu. His letter was as follows:

To the Editor of "The Press."

Sir:—A few weeks ago I read "Over the Hills to the Poor House" in "The Sunday Press," which reminded me of a blind man who was a patient in the Queen's Hospital, Honolulu, and of a poem under the same title. John Brash was a native of Scotland. Perhaps he got his poetical inspiration from the "Heather" like Bobby Burns. At any rate myself and my assistant often were asked to write down for him, such verses like the ones inclosed, and I remember well when he wrote this one.

He had been on a visit to the "Lunatic Home," where his friend, Harry Swinton, was in charge. King Lunatic left practically his entire estate in trust for the erection and maintenance of a home for aged Hawaiians and he "built better than he knew," for the estate has increased in value and being honestly and economically administered, it is a blessing to many Hawaiians, who either have no other home or whose relatives are too poor to look after their old folks.

If you think your readers would care to read this piece, I have no objection to your publishing same. I am an interested reader of your paper and among my friends here are several from Pennsylvania who often ask me for a copy.

Leahi or Diamond Head is an extinct volcano, where "Uncle Sam" has erected Fort Ruger to protect the entrance to Honolulu harbor and there is also on of the most powerful lights to guide the mariner at night.

JOHANNES F. ECKARDT.
Honolulu, Nov. 12, 1910.

Over the hills to the Poor House.
What a fountain of thought in that line—
It tells us the light of the worn out life
Forever has ceased to shine.
It tells us of wrongs that the aged ones bear
From ungrateful and heartless kin,
And tells us to bless him who builds up a fold
Where the poor may be gathered in.

Over the hills to the Poor House—
What a blow to the weary old man, Who has toiled for the children that shun him
As only a fond parent can.
He had hoped when old age came upon
him,
With the offspring he reared to abide,
But the ingrates to whom he gave being
Were the first ones to thrust him aside.

Over the hills to the Poor House—
The old man must seek a retreat,
For he can not remain in the city
For he is trampled by hurrying feet.
What care those who worship King
Mammon,
For the tottering form in their way,
He is only a helpless old pauper,
For whom they may now and then prize.

Over the hills to the Poor House—
He will find food and shelter from cold,
And though they be strangers who greet
him,
They are those who can feel for the old.
He will find, too, what has been denied
him,
By those who should soothe his life's wane
A haven of peace and contentment,
Protected from hunger and rain.

Just here let me pause and ask pardon,
For an error that slipped through my pen—
In my efforts at poetic musings,
I made sad mistakes now and then.
This is a HOME, not a Poor House.
In the sense my quotation conveys—
'Tis a place where the aged and weary
In comfort can live out their days.

The old folks who enter its portals
Step into a home of their own—
A gift from a ruler they worshipped Whose soul to its Maker has flown
No paupers are those that surround us,
But heirs to a noble bequest,
Where the wearied may lay down life's burden,
And quietly sink down to their rest.

No taskmaster here to enslave them,
Or force them to earn what they eat,
No thankless town-poor of torture,
Where the friendless were tied up and beaten.

In this Home for the aged, the inmates
In reason can do as their pleasure,
For their great Benefactor directed,
That nothing should deprive them of ease.

What a monument here was erected,
By that Royal dead friend we all above.

And it stands as a lasting reminder,
That King Lunatic was true,
True in his love for his people,
True to the love of his birth,
And in all the bright traits of true manhood.

His last few equals on earth.
May the image of good lunatic,
Who died to the bettering poor,
Be never forgotten while life lasts,
Or long—blessed be his memory—
And his soul be forever in sight.

Thousands of people recommend Here's one case:

Charles Kurz, 1618 Centre street, Baker City, Ore., says: "I gladly give my name as one who has been benefited by Doan's Backache Kidney Pills. For twenty-five years I endured untold agony from gravel. There were severe pains in my back, and when the gravel was passed, I was in such great misery that I often had to scream. Attacks of this kind came at regular intervals and gradually my health was undermined.
I lost weight, had a poor appetite and felt miserable in every way. I spent hundreds of dollars for doctors' treatment, and I used many well-known remedies, but I did not receive much relief until I began taking Doan's Backache Kidney Pills. I was led to procure this remedy by reading the many public statements given in its favor, and I am now glad that I did so. This preparation has brought me great relief and has warded off return attacks of my trouble. I shall always do what I can to make the merit of Doan's
